

Lance Muirheid

Lance Muirheid is a seventh-generation farmer from Macon County, Illinois, where his family farm dates back to 1856. He and his father raise corn, soybeans, and wheat across 1,700 acres, including the original family homestead. In addition to production farming, Lance operates an LG Seeds dealership, selling corn and soybean seed to neighboring farms. He also enjoys connecting the public to agriculture through his small roadside farm stand and part-time work as a beertender at Decatur Brew Works, where he often shares insights about modern farming. Lance earned his bachelor's degree in Biology and Ecology from Illinois College, where he helped pioneer the school's first agriculture program. Active in the agricultural community, he serves as the Young Leader Chair for the Macon County Farm Bureau. In his free time, Lance enjoys visiting national parks, reading, and spending time outdoors with his two miniature Australian shepherds.

ILLINOIS
AGRICULTURAL LEADERSHIP
FOUNDATION