

Teri Foster

Teri Foster serves as Vice President of People and Culture at The Maschhoffs, one of North America's largest family-owned pork production networks. In this role, she leads the company's people strategy, focusing on cultivating an agile, engaged, and purpose-driven workplace that supports both business performance and employee well-being. Teri's leadership philosophy—"leadership looks a lot like loving people"—shapes her approach to talent development, employee engagement, and organizational culture. With a heart for rural communities and those who work the land, she brings authenticity, empathy, and vision to her role. Teri's career reflects a commitment to helping individuals grow into their full potential while advancing the agricultural industry's shared mission of stewardship, progress, and service. She is passionate about creating spaces where people feel heard, valued, and inspired to lead. Her work at The Maschhoffs continues to shape a culture of trust and purpose within modern agriculture.
