

Andy Vigna

Andy Vigna is an Account Manager for Bayer Crop Science, where he supports growers and partners through his expertise in seed genetics, digital agriculture, and customer relationship management. A native of Dwight, Illinois, Andy's passion for farming and machinery began on his family's farm and led him to study at Purdue University. His career spans multiple facets of agriculture, from working on a sugar cane plantation in Hawaii to serving in the heavy equipment industry with Ziegler Cat and Fabick Cat. These experiences broadened his understanding of production systems and global agriculture. Andy joined Monsanto—now Bayer—where he has since advanced through a variety of account management roles. After years living across the Midwest, he and his family returned home to Dwight, where he remains active in the local Rotary Club. Outside of work, Andy enjoys spending time with his wife, Michelle, and their two daughters, attending dirt track races, and working in the yard.
