

Andrew Killian

Andrew (Andy) Killian is a Field Sales Representative with Bayer Crop Science, where he focuses on crop protection solutions that help farmers make data-driven, sustainable decisions. A lifelong resident of Lexington, Illinois, Andy grew up working on his family's grain farm alongside his dad, brother, and uncle. His early hands-on experiences—and time spent on a neighboring dairy—gave him a deep appreciation for the diverse realities of production agriculture. He holds a degree in Production Agriculture from Illinois State University and began his career with Piatt County Service Company, later managing a Brandt retail facility before joining Bayer in 2024. Andy has more than 15 years of experience in agronomy and agricultural retail and is committed to building strong grower relationships rooted in trust and shared success. Active in his community, he serves on the local school board and drainage district. He and his wife, Jenny, live in Lexington with their three children, Anna, Allie, and Thomas.
