Eric Muller is a Sales Representative for Nutrien, one of the world's leading agricultural input and service companies. Based in the Pacific Northwest, Eric works directly with growers to provide agronomic solutions that drive profitability and sustainability. His role requires clear communication, customer relationship management, and a deep understanding of the fertilizer and crop nutrition industry. Eric earned his bachelor's degree in Agricultural Business Economics and Forestry Management from Oregon State University, where he combined his love for the outdoors with an interest in economics and finance. He is passionate about the business side of agriculture and plans to expand his expertise in corporate finance and entrepreneurship. Outside of work, Eric enjoys hiking, hunting, and spending time in nature—activities that continue to fuel his appreciation for the land and the people who care for it.
